

KAI MOTTA ABSTRACT GRAFFITI ARTIST

Kai Motta is a London born self-taught studio artist currently based on the south coast of England. Initially he was hugely inspired by graffiti, street art, hip hop and skate culture. Later he became obsessed with the American Expressionist abstract art movement. He now exploits both mediums to produce his graffiti-esque abstract artwork. The paint is applied with uncleaned brushes where the paint has dried in order to achieve a hard calligraphic edge. The paintings are produced to look like they are saying something, with the brushstrokes implying the meaning rather than a definitive set of letters, building on the rich history of asemic art/writing.

Commissions

"Creating the perfect visual experience when designing the interiors for high end client's premises requires a microscopic attention to detail to match the craftsmanship and style of said client. With Norton, Kai Motta's superlative work with his use of asemic graffiti/abstract art conveyed a style and attitude we knew was a perfect fit for the environment."
